History In Your Hands...
Money In The Bank

Superior is pleased to announce the discovery and acquisition of 100 unpublished letters from the pen of one of America's most honored and revered leaders, Harry S. Truman.

This remarkable collection of 'personal' letters represents an actual glimpse into America's most beloved President of the 20th Century, Harry S. Truman.

Here is history witnessed first hand, not rewritten, nor analyzed by third parties - but to be discovered anew by a by a whole generation of Americans.

Not since Lincoln, and the period of Reconstruction follwing the Civil War, had America lived through such an important era.

Truman's presidency began with the sudden ascendancy to the highest office in the land, during wartime - and following the death of a beloved President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. His White House years were significant and momentous ones for the country, as he was called upon to act decisively in the face of domestic and international events, as these letters clearly illustrate. The Marshall Plan, that vast and compassionate program to put Europe back to its feet again after World War II, was Truman's "Reconstruction," just as Lincoln, many years before him, had sought, with equal compassion, to bring relief to a divided Union. Consider, as well, the many other important events of Truman's presidency: the negotiations with Stalin at the Potsdam Conference; the decision to drop the atomic bomb; the Berlin Blockade and his firm stance against the Soviets; the entrance into the Korean War (with the enlisted aid of the United Nations); the battle with the political press and opinion polls; McCarthyism and the period of national hysteria; and the issue that Truman called the greatest test of his presidency, eclipsing even the atomic bomb: the dismissal of America's great military leader, General Douglas MacArthur.

One of the most "colorful" and outspoken Presidents of all time, Truman ws well-known for his down to earth language which earned him the rightful nickname "Give 'em Hell Harry." His most caustic remarks, however, were reserved for the press and journalists, in particular, dubbing them "prostitutes of the mind" in reference to their deliberate distortions in reporting the truth. Yet Truman was also one of the most widely read persons to live in the White House, finding solace and inner strength in both history and literature, having remarked that he had more faith in poets than reporters. He often quoted Shakespeare in depth, and even applied the teachings of Tennyson to the nasty business of fighting wars, remarking once that Tennyson "was a man very much concerned with stopping wars, and I guess you might say I was, too." Truman's success in ending World War II and his forthright attempt to stop North Korean aggression proved that he knew where the buck stopped, which he had ample opportunity to demonstrate throughout his presidency. "The buck stops here" and "If you can't take the heat, get out of the kitchen" are just two of his quotes that are now a part of our American heritage.

Today, Republicans and Democrats alike hitch their political wagons to the Truman legend. But that wasn't always the case. When Roosevelt died, the nation watched in horror as a depthless little haberdasher from Missouri moved to Washington D.C. Yet Truman was no accidental President. From the moment he took the Presidential oath of office, Truman was the President of the United States. It is hard to disagree with the 1962 New York Times poll that placed Truman ninth out of 31 Presidents. With true humility, Truman remarked about his ranking: "I don't know how they came to put me so high up on the list, but I appreciate it nevertheless." Now, twenty-five years after that poll, it is clear that Trumans's rank in presidential history is justly deserved. And truly, Truman's rank can only be enhanced as these unpublished letters are made public.

It has been said that it is easier to write a primary source biography of Beethoven or da Vinci than one of a twentieth century contemporary. Today, the once mighty pen must now compete with the telephonic age. What would we really know of Abraham Lincoln if he had telephoned instead of written so many terse, incisive, and explicit notes to his generals during the Civil War. But Truman, unlike Lincoln, had a choice. What would we know of him if he had not chosen to put in writing his many thoughts and off-handed political comments. Collectors of autograph letters know only too well...that in the twentieth century, communications and opinions expressed between presidents and their confidants are seldom handwritten or even typed. Thankfully, technology has not a defeated us: Truman found his best expression on paper, and we are all the richer for it.

NEW TREND in Examining Rare Coins

If you have recently attended rare coin auction sales, you may have observed that the latest trend in examining rare coins is in a darkly lit room and a powerful single source of lighting. The purpose behind this type of viewing is rather simple. By eliminiating outside light sources and allowing a single powerful light source to provide the lighting, we find that glare is no longer a problem and the coin can be maneuvered to provide a more controlled vision.

The interesting feature here is that this manner of viewing coins is being utilized by several of the major grading laboratories and thus by utilizing the same principle one is more likely to be able to examine a coin and better predict how the coin will be graded if sent in for a certificate.

We are pleased to announce that Superior Stamp & Coin is distributing both the light source and the magnifier which are being used to grade coins by some of these grading laboratories. It has been no secret within the trade that our line of halogen lights and magnifiers have been great sellers. We are pleased to provide this listing of our more popular products. We have placed an asterisk beside the two items being used by these laboratories. All represent great quality and will serve you for many years.

SHARE IN THE TRADITION

THE OFFICIAL 1989 GEORGE BUSH INAUGURAL MEDAL

YOU CAN OWN A PIECE OF HISTORY

It's a noble American tradition. Every four years, voters from all over the United States celebrate their cherished freedom by casting a ballot in the presidential election — selecting one man to occupy the highest office in the land. On January 20th, 1989, George Bush — the popular choice of the 1988 election — will take the Oath of Office in Washington, D.C. and be sworn in as the 41st President of our country.

Now, you can share in the heritage and tradition of this important event with the Official 1989 George Bush Inaugural Medals, struck in gold, silver, and bronze.

PERSONALLY APPROVED

These coveted medals are the only officially authorized medals to be created for the occasion. The design has been approved by George Bush and by the Inaugural Medal Committee chaired by Senator Mark Hatfield, and endorsed by the American BiCentennial Presidential Inaugural Committee.

Each of these Inaugural medals will feature the official Inaugural portrait of George Bush, designed by the celebrated American sculptor Mico Kaufman. This is the fourth Inaugural medal produced by Mr. Kaufman, and is his best — a stunning and innovative work of art. The reverse is also an original design by Mr. Kaufman, featuring the 19½-foot high statue of "Freedom," which stands atop the United States Capitol Building.

Furthermore, these medals are superb examples of the minter's art. Each medal is being struck by the Medallic Art Company, a firm which has a history of producing Inaugural medals since 1925.

POPULAR AND HISTORIC

Modern Inaugural medals have become a highly collected series. Interest in them has skyrocketed in recent years, and past issues are eagerly pursued by collectors and dealers. Because of their historical importance and superb artistry, many of these medals occupy places of honor in the collections of our country's most discriminating numismatists.

SPECIAL OPPORTUNITY

The Official 1989 George Bush Inaugural Medals are a special opportunity for Americans to possess a "piece of history." It is a rare chance to own a limited edition collector's item that has been personally approved by the President, marks an event of great significance in the life of our nation, and is the classic work of a famous sculptor. These are medals that you will be proud to own — and proud to pass on to future generations.

RESERVE YOUR MEDALS TODAY!

Following the instructions of the Inaugural Committee, five important George Bush Inaugural Medal varieties will be struck. In addition, two strictly limited edition, serially numbered sets will be offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

DON'T BE DISAPPOINTED!

As you can imagine, production of these important Inaugural Medals is strictly limited, and only a small number of Americans will ever have the privilege of owning one. In 1985, for example, the complete Collector's Set sold out very quickly, and many were disappointed. Since all orders will be shipped based on the date of receipt of your order, we urge you to act quickly.

Please complete and return the enclosed order form today to insure that you can share in the tradition of these historic American Inaugural Medals.

200 YEARS OF TRADITION

The tradition of producing souvenirs to mark inaugurations began in 1789 with our first President, George Washington.

Washington ordered special engraved gilt buttons — featuring the Arms of the United States — which he used to adorn his brown inaugural coat. Word of this quickly spread, and by the time the Inauguration took place, others at the event had special buttons of various designs on their coats to commemorate the occasion. Thus, beginning with the first inauguration on April 30, 1789, Americans displayed their desire to own tokens of these historic events.

In 1901, the first official medal was struck for the Inauguration of William McKinley. Theodore Roosevelt chose Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the famed sculptor, to design his medal, and began the practice of selecting America's foremost artists to create these medals.

The 1989 Mico Kaufman-designed Inaugural Medal continues this proud practice. His stylish creation is the perfect medal to mark the 200th anniversary of an American tradition that allows you to hold art and history in your hand.

ABOUT THE SCULPTOR

Mico Kaufman, whose designs for the 1989 George Bush Inaugural Medal were approved by the American Bicentennial Presidential Inaugural Committee, was chosen Sculptor of the Year by the American Numismatic Society in 1978. He has designed several previous Inaugural Medals, including the 1973 Gerald Ford Vice Presidential medal, the 1974 Gerald Ford Presidential medal, and the 1985 Reagan-Bush Inaugural Medal. Kaufman studied Art at the Academy of Fine Arts in Rome and Florence, Italy, and his works have frequently been displayed in New England, where he makes his home. The stunning Inaugural portrait of George Bush marks another high point in Mr. Kaufman's long and illustrious career.

AUTHENTIC GOLD NUGGETS

Always a popular item yet so seldom encountered are these gold nuggets. These were obtained from a mining project in Northern California and held by the seller for many many years until the most recent upward movement in the price of gold caught their fancy to sell.

When we have attempted to locate nuggets of this type in the past they in most cases were simply not available. When we have seen small amounts available they usually cost between 3 and five times the price of gold. Remember these are high quality nuggets.

Our supply of gold nuggets is limited to just 25 ounces. They go out at prices so fantastic that we must limit purchases and sorry the offer is only available to our regular readers who have an existing account number registered with us. Once supply is gone, sorry but it's all over.

We will offer these genuine California gold nuggets by their actual weight. For purposes of sale we use the standard "penny wieght" basis of which there are 20 penny weights to the ounce.

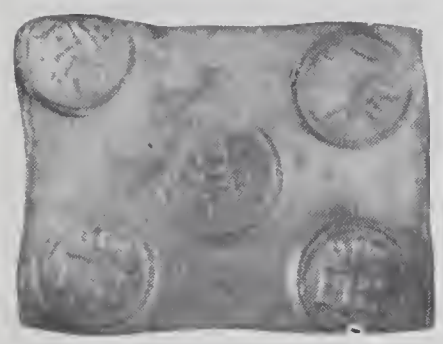
SWEDISH PLATE MONEY "NICOBAR"

The Plate Money of Sweden



Between 1644 and 1776 the government of Sweden issued one of the most interesting and unusual forms of currency - plates of copper stamped with marks of value to circulate as money. On viewing examples of the different denominations which were inuse, ranging from 1/2 to 10 Daler, it is hard to view these as a "money of convenience", at least in our frame of reference.

The Swedish Falu mine has been prodicing copper since the Middle Ages. In fact, the mining company there, "Stora Kopparbergs Bergslag", is considered to be the oldest commercial firm still in existence. During the 16th Century, copper production in Sweden represented only a small fraction of that produced in all of Europe, but an increase in the demand for copper by Spain for a subsidiary coinage and a reduction in continental copper production increased the importance of Swedish copper in international trade. During the first half of the 17th Century it has been estimated that Swedish copper accounted for two-thirds of the needs of Europe even though that production amounted to only 3,000 tons or so in 1650.

The primary coinage of Sweden during this period was of silver and this had to be imported as there was little, if any, domestic production. Copper, therefore, played a prominent role in maintaining the silver coinage of Sweden as it was exported to other European trading centers, primarily Amsterdam, where it would be sold and silver purchased. A minor coinage in copper did circulate in Sweden and here we encounter an unusual thing; different metallic composition.

The Riksdaler of Sweden was similar to that of the other northern European countries bearing the likeness of the sovereign, coats of arms, etc., and being of an international standard of fineness and weight which remained fairly stable. Daler Silvermynt (Dale SM) was a unit of reckoning or account relating to a value based on silver; it need not have been actual coin. In the same light, Daler Kopparmynt (Daler KM) reflected a unit of accounting based on copper, coined or not. The differences in these units is found in the successive devaluations of the copper coinage in reference to silver coins of the same face values. Daler KM was also an accounting unit used by the general public. The plate money of Sweden was always struck and valued in Daler SM denominations.

Swedish officials were well aware of the impact their copper had on European markets and how, if production was even slightly reduced, increased demand and prices would follow quickly. They also realized that storage of copper which could not be immedialtely sold (if the price wasn't "right" at the moment) would also reduce supplies of available copper and tend to maintain a higher price. Another means of reducing the amount of copper available to European markets was to increase the use of copper in domestic coinage; this could quickly be reversed and coins exported when market conditions made it feasible. As will be seen, this occurred time and again with the plate money.

The first Swedish copper coinage of 1624 consisted of 1/2, 1, and 2 ore denominations; these denominations were chosen to correspond with the same face values of silver coins, the value of the copper equal to the value to the silver in comparable pieces. Although linked by denomination , the values fluctuated according to the open market prices of the metals: where silver maintained a fairly constant level, the value of copper frequently, often drastically. A great decline in the value of copper in 1624 - when the price went from 131-1/2 Daler per skeppund (136 kilograms) to 150 Daler within a short time, then dropping to 90 Daler KM or 60 Riksdaler - caused great depreciation of copper money in the country. It became reasonable for people to exchange riksdalers for the low-priced coppers and sell them abroad at a profit.

Between 1625 and 1638 the exchange values between silver and copper fluctuated greatly, finally settling with copper holding a value about 20% less than silver: this relationship was finalized by law in 1643. However, it was understood that increases in the price of copper would occur and upset this balance, and the government acknowledged that copper coinage might be used as a commodity. This view brought copper coins into a new light and role in the coming year.

The Swedish government realized the great prospect of exporting copper coins as commodities, but closely examined how minting costs would reduce their profit margins, For example, the 1 ore coins, of which there were 32 per Daler (although this ratio varied from time to time), was acknowledged to have a much higher unit minting cost per Daler than in minting a single Daler coin. In 1643 the Privy Council recommended minting copper in the form of small plates in 1,2,3, and 4 Riksdaler denominations. The minting of these pieces would significantly reduce moneying costs and offer a convenient manner to transport coined copper.

Plate copper - plates of unrefined copper a few centimeters thick and of a rectangular shape - had been produced at the Falu mine for years; this was a very practical form for handling and transporting copper. In fact, the first plate money issued - the 10 Daler SM of 1644 - weighed 19.72 kilograms. To indicate the value of this plate, and to show that it was indeed a coin, they were stamped in each of the corners with a circular seal bearing the initials of Queen Christiana, the date, and the crown; the value was denoted in a circular stamp in the center of the plate. This particular means of stamping plate money continued through all the subsequent issues.

The very fact that copper was worth so much less than silver (80-90 times for the same weight) made the range in the copper coinage huge, from the 1 ore to the 10 Daler piece 400 times heavier and larger! This vast difference makes it hard to believe that many considered the 10 Daler plate to be a true, circulating legal tender item. Indeed, most of these giants were exported within a few years of issue. A total of 26,774 of the 10 Daler plates were struck in 1644-45; 21,317 were known to have been shipped abroad by the end of 1646. Today fewer than 10 examples are known to exist.

Although the 10 Daler plate was a convenient way to transport copper and cost 30% less to mint than a comparable value of lower denomination round coins, it was probably considered to be a bit too large for convenience in trade; to point this up, the largest denomination in subsequent issues of plates was 8 Daler. This new denomination plate could be more readily handled and transported, or stored as an asset while lower denomination plates (1,2, and 4 Daler) were aimed at general circulation and usage as money.

During the next 15 years further issues of plate money came out at the rate of 56, 60, and 60 Riksdaler per skepund. This consequently was reflected in a reduction in the weight of a 1 Daler plate from 1.81 kilograms in 1649 to 1.62 in March of 1660, and finally to 1.51 kilograms in November of that same year.

Once again, a common situation occurred; older, heavier money was driven from circulation being replaced by new money of lighter weight and lower value. Whereas Sweden maintained silver as its primary coinage, a lack of silver in 1660 caused a large issuance of copper coinage, fixed at a rate of 1 to 3 between silver and copper coins. In other words, 4 Daler SM corresponded to 12 Daler KM. This rate remained in effect until 1673 when warfare between England and Holland disrupted Swedish trade with Amsterdam. This war, and the Swedish war with Brandenburg (1674-75) and Denmark (1676) caused further difficulties for the Swedes by cutting off foreign trade; the large quantities of copper coinage on hand in Sweden caused the exchange rate with silver to fluctuate again.

Between 1675 and 1679 large numbers of plates were stored or deposited in the Riksens Standed Bank which then supported the Treasury with loans. As had occurred before, when the overseas price of copper became attractive, the government banned private exportation of the metal; this was done to maintain the high price and to allow the Bank to be the sole official supplier,and for the government to indirectly benefit from the profits of the Bank. Plate money continued to be issued in large quantities until 1690 when a Royal Decree stated that as long as copper was worth more abroad than at home in the form of coinage, State-owned copper would be exported and minting would not be considered unless the foreign prices fell. Private parties, however , could do whatever they wished with their own copper. This wholesale exportation of copper enabled Sweden to obtain the quantities of silver which appeared in large issues of silver coinage. In 1698 copper plates were no longer considered to be coinage per se, but as a form of commodity subject to various export restrictions.

Coinage in copper did not resume until 1709 at which time Danish attacks on Sweden disrupted the export trade in copper (again). At that time the value of copper was 120 Daler SM per skeppund; plates were issued in large quantities until 1714 when a considerable rise in the price of copper made their mintihg less profitable. As usual, an export ban came into effect to reduce private exportation of the metal.

In 1715 King Charles was forced to raise large sums of money to repay loans taken to support the various wars of the preceding years. To do this the metal content of plate money was drastically altered from 120 to 180 Daler per skeppund. Old plates were to be countermarked to indicate revaluation, and new plates had a rhombic instead of a circular center stamp. This revaluation made it econimically impossible to export plates, and between 1715 and 1716 about 3 million Daler SM was issued in plate form. At the same time a series of token coinage came out - money of necessity - to generate liquid capital for the government on a supposedly short-term basis. This proved to be very successful for the government as the tokens circulated at the same par value as coins of a higher metal content value. The government later gained again when the token coinage was redeemed at quite a bit less than the originally promised exchange redemption value.

Until 1717 very little plate money had been redeemed for the token money of necessity. To encourage such exchanges a Royal decree was issued which ordered the devaluation of plate money by one third, effective March 1, 1718. People seeking redemption at full value after that date would be offered only tokens, bonds, or paper money in exchange. Redeemed plates recieved an additional stamp (the Lion of Gotha on a shield and the date, 1718); unstamped plates were devalued as specified. Another decree banned the exportation of unstamped plates, and yet another issued a few days later ordered the confiscation of all plates not bearing the new counterstamp. Again, within days another decree ordered that an additional round stamp bearing three crowns was to be placed on the reverse of those plates with the Lion of Gotha mark. Further decrees and acts stated that those plates bearing both new stamps would be valid; no other plates would be worth the value stamped on them if issued prior to 1717. Researcher Bertel Tingstrom has determined in this research of extant plate money that only about 25% of the plates owned by the general public in 1718 had been submitted for the State-mandated restamping.

Minting of plate money resumed in 1720 with 2 and 4 Daler denominations, the 4 Daler weighing 3 kilograms; large numbers of these were quickly exported. For the next 25 years, the price of copper remained fairly stable, as did the issuing of plates. However, changes in the laws regulating banking activities and the use of banknotes increased the overall use of paper money while the use of plate money declined. The increased banknote circulation soon caused a shortage of plates, and as usual export bans were in effect from 1742 to 1744. To ease the shortage of smaller plates, lower denomination banknotes were introduced to help in making change for what had earlier been the only banknote denomination, 50 Daler KM. The falling value of banknotes caused by huge issues, and the shortage of plates caused by higher copper prices overseas, forced the government to restrict the minting of plates; between 1745 and 1750, and again from 1757 to 1767, plates were issued in very small quantities. The following indicates the official view of the non-importance of plates at the time: in 1761 the mint at Avesta was destroyed by fire. That portion of the mint which produced round coins was immediately rebuilt; that part which produced plates was not reopened until 1767! Although few plates were being produced, large numbers were being bought by the Bank, evidently intending to export them at some convenient time in the future.

The coinage act of 1776 instituted a new system of coin reckoning wherein plates were considered to be only commodities. In fact, when the Riksdaler became the official money unit of currency in 1771, plates were banned as money. In the following decade many of the plates remaining in Sweden were shipped overseas due to the continued rise of copper prices through the 1780's.

After a break of 10 years, the coinage of plate money was resumed in 1786 although the plates were no longer included in the mint accounts as coins. The denominations or other markings of these issues are unknown to us today as the plates were primarily for the commercial or export trade; it is probable that they were of the shape and weight of the old 4 Daler plates. There are several accounts which indicate that plates were being struck as late as 1809, mainly for export, and in the same form as before, It is not known if all plates struck after 1776 carried the 1768 date as so few have survived for the present time. It is known that large numbers of plates were shipped to the Far East with the Danish Asiatic Company's shipping lists denoting major shipments of "Swedish minted copper money" during the period 1776-1803. And so the plate money of Sweden passed from being a convenient manner of handling copper coinage for large transactions, and frequently as a handy means of conveying a commodity, in history. Based on mint records it is estimated that nearly 48 million plates were issued between 1644 and 1776; as of 1986, fewer than 11,000 examples were known to still exist. These examples of a financial experiment which endured over 130 years before being finally abandoned represent a fascinating episode in numismatic and financial history. Information for this article was obtained primarily from "Plate Money - The World's Largest Currency" by Bertel Tingstrom. This excellent survey and study examines all aspects of the plate money of Sweden; it has a wealth of imformation on mining and minting techniques, detailed information on government policies, as well as many charts, tables, graphs, and appendices which add greatly to the value of the book which is also lavishly illustrated. Anyone remotely interested in the plate money of Sweden should be an owner of this book.

The Last Voyage of the Danish East India Company Ship "Nicobar"

The "Nicobar", a 47-meter long cargo vessel belonging to the Danish East India Company, sailed from the roadstead of Copenhagen on June 21, 1782, bound for the Danish trading posts in the Nicobar Islands and along the coast of India. The "Nicobar" proceeded to Helsingfor (Cronborg) and Kullen in Sweden to pick up cargo; contrary winds forced the ship to return to Cronborg before reaching and returning from Sweden where cargo was taken aboard - copper for trade in the form of obsolete Swedish plate money. "Nicobar" finaly cleared Scandinavian waters for the East on July 23rd under the guidance of Captain Crisji (or Chrystie as recorded by an English Translator).

The cargo ship proceeded to the Madeera Islands arriving there in mid-September, again hampered by contrary winds. Shortly after leaving these waters, "Nicobar" encountered the doldrums in which winds were erratic, wispy, or non-existent for days on end. Many of the crew became ill with scurvy which changed to spotted fever among some of the men; for others their ailment became "putrification fever". All in all, most of the crewmen were unable to fulfill their duties. "Nicobar" met several other ships during this time, several offering advice on seeking port in Brazil for rest and recuperation; one English captain provided a small number of oranges for the members of the crew.

Captain Crisji asked for guidance from the council of the ship (the mates), suggesting they head for the coast of Guinea (present day Ghana) where there was a Danish fort from which they could obtain provisions and new crewmen. The mates agreed to this and every effort was made towards this goal.

The ship's assistant, M. Jorgensen, wrote of these times in 1794, saying:

> "Even though we were aware of the weakness of the others, we were encouraged to work so if one fell down and could not stand up immediately the other would take his place."

Jorgensen also became seriously ill, as did the other officers; at one point only one seaman had the strength to go aloft to tend the sails. The medical condition of the crewmen continued to deteriorate as there were no medicines or provisions aboard to treat or relieve the effects of the varied illness of the crew members.

On January 16, 1783, land was spotted in the distance; the crewmen reckoned the ship to be off the coast of Guinea, but they had no clear idea of their exact location. On the following day, six canoes, each with 12 to 14 natives, approached "Nicobar". The crewmen attempted to put up a fierce front by manning the deck guns and bearing other weapons, but their thin ranks and poor condition did not allay their fear of the natives. Jorgensen wrote:

> "(...among them was one who could speak a little English), asked us many questions - if we were English, if we had sailed a long time, and if we had many sick. When these questions were answered they were not bold enough to come aboard."

The crew learned that the land they saw was Cap Appollonia, which meant a Dutch settlement was not too far to the east. On the 18th, "Nicobar" came near the fort in question, fired a cannon, and observed a canoe coming from the short to inquire about them. The fort was called Axim and the people there had at first feared "Nicobar" to have been an English ship. On the following day, "Nicobar" anchored close to the fort, saluted it, and received a return salute. The governor sent out a conoe with greetings and a variety of provisions. After resting and reprovisioning for a few days, "Nicobar"set sail on January 23rd arriving at the main Dutch fort in the area, D'Elmina, on the 25th. The Governor General offered assistance in the form of new crew members, but Captain Crisji decided to sail to the nearby Danish fort of Christiansborg to obtain new crewmen; "Nicobar" arrived there on the 28th.

The Danish Governor General was advised of the conditions of the ship and of the ordeal undertaken in the voyage. Letters were sent back to the Dutch governor at D'Elmina and the English fort at Cab-Corse requesting seamen to replace the dead or seriously ill of the "Nicobar"; At last fourteen men were sent from D'Elmina, but some of them had no previous seafaring experience. Several capable men were obtained from another ship at Christiansborg and from the governor there. All of the new men were hired for the duration of the voyage, taking their oath from the governor in the presence of Captain Crisji and others of the crew. Replacements for the two anchors lost in the roadstead of Akre (Accra) were obtained from the Governor General at Christiansborg.

On March 12th, "Nicobar" sailed from the coast of Guinea for South Africa; the crew numbered 36. There were no problems with the ship of the weather until arriving in False Bay, South Africa on May 20th. The day after arriving at False Bay, however, the men who had joined "Nicobar"in Christiansborg refused to continue work. Captain Crisji ordered the first mate to complain to the captain of a Danish warship known to be in the area, but after realizing that they did not know when assistance might arrive from that source accepted the fact that these men would be leaving the ship for food, Captain Crisji went to the Cape to discuss the problem of remanning the ship with the Dutch Governor, Baron Joachim van Plettenberg, and to complain about those who had deserted.

After a few days Captain Crisji returned to "Nicobar" with seven Lascars who had survived the wreck of the English East India Company ship "Grosvenor" which had run aground the year before; several women who had also survived that wreck also came along. Captains of two other ships in False Bay at the time sent over four men apiece and three others deserted their ships to join "Nicobar".

On July 10th after refitting and reprovisioning "Nicobar", the ship weighed anchor and sailed from False Bay in the company of another Danish ship, "Kroonprins". During that night rough weather was encountered, a severe storm arose, and "Nicobar" was forced to sail closer to the shoreline than usual. During the morning of the 11th, "Nicobar" ran aground on a reef about 1.5 kilometers off Quion Point located near Cape Agulhas; the ship broke up fairly quickly in the heavy storm.

A total of eleven people were rescued from "Nicobar", seven Europeans (two of whom had joined the ship while at False Bay), three of the Lascars, and one of the women who earlier had survived the wreck of the "Grosvenor".

Arrangements were made by the Dutch East India Company to recover goods washed ashore so they could be sold on behalf of the Danish East India Company, but others got to the scene of the wreck first. Inquiries revealed that farmers from the Stellenbosch District had plundered the cargo which washed ashore. A few culprits were charged with theft, but not much else was done.

One crewman of the "Nicobar", M. Jorgensen, had been away from the ship when it sailed from False Bay and he later attempted to recover records and other items from the wreck, but without success. He wrote an extensive account of this, the last, voyage of the "Nicobar" for the directors of the Danish East India Company; the greater part of this narrative is based on his account.

The Rediscovery of the "Nicobar"

During the morning of January 4, 1987, Louis Groenwald and Wilfred Chivell, long-time friends, diving companions, and residents of Gansbaar, South Afrida, went out for a spear fishing outing near Quion Point. While swimming among the kelp they noticed an object lying in a depression on the reef below and, as both of them had done some salvage diving in the past, decided to investigate. They found some copper plates, a broken anchor, and a canon a short distance away. Groenwald and Chivell realized that they had discovered the wrech of an old ship and kept looking for more artifacts to bring to the surface which might help them identify the wreck. They discovered a total of twelve cast iron cannons and many more of the unusual rectangular copper plates - they brought four of these back with them for further study hoping they might give some clue as to the identity of the shipwreck they had found.

One of the copper plates had five circular impressions stamped on it, one in each corner and in the cinter; these bore the date "1750" and "2 Daler". Checking various sources, they determined that the odd copper plates had been a form of money called Klippingar ("clipped money") or more commonly Platmynt ("plate money") used in Sweden during the 17th and 18th centuries. With this as a guide to the timeframe of the wreck, Groenwald and Chivell contacted Malcolm Turner, a local historian who maintained extensive files on shipwrecks and, upon viewing the plate money, Turner advised the men that they had found the "Nicobar", a Danish East India Company merchant ship which sank in 1783 while carrying a cargo of pog iron and copper to the Nicobar Islands. He told them that their find was unique; no one had ever found an East India man which had been lost on the "outbound" portion of the journey - that is, still carrying its European cargo!

Groenwald and Chivell then contacted Ms. Lalou Meltzer, Numismatist of the South Africa Cultural Museum in Capetown; they discussed the importance of the find and filing of claims and requests for permission to salvage the site of the wreck. Very shortly thereafter a permit was granted for an indepth survey of the site (with videos and photography) and the excavation of the coins.

Groenwald, Chivell and a third companion, Jimmy Herbert, had "the time of their lives" over the next weeks,. They worked diligently to carefully survey the site before actually proceeding with and excavation work. Their timing for the photographic work couldn't have been better as they had two days of fairly calm seas and reasonable visibility (most of the time the water is quite rough with very restricted visibility), a condition which occurs only three to four days per year on an average. The wreck lay 1.75 to 2 kilometers from Cape L'Aqulhas, the Southernmost of Africa. The depth of the site ranged from 1 to 8 meters (3 to 20 feet), the main portion of the wreck being at 4.5 meters (15 feet).

The divers were positive of the identity of the ship from the start of excavation; when it was positively determined that the cargo was indeed pig iron and copper plates and that the ship had 12 cannons, they found a match in old shipping documents. During the 1700's all ships anchoring in False Bay were reported to the Cape by letter ("Inkomende briewe"); one of these dated May 13, 1783, Contained:

> "...Deensch Comp's schip NICOBAR zijnde den Julij passato van Copenhagen en den 13 Maart LaestL. van Christiaanburg gelegen op de CustGuinee vertrokken,bemand met 35 kipen en gem't met 12 stukken cannon voorts gedestineert na Traneuebaar..."

This document identified the "Nicobar" as having sailed from Copenhagen in July (of the previous year - 1782), sailing from the coast of Guinea (Ghana) on March 13, of having a crew of 35, having 12 cannons, and being bound for Tranquebar, the center of Danish trade in the Far East.

The actual excavation brought several other interesting things to light from which some importance assumptions were made; namely:

1. Eight of the cannons were found very near the ballast and cargo, while four were situated a short distance away. As they had a general idea that "Nicobar" was a two-decked ship with a lower hold, it was assumed that eight cannons had been mounted on the main (first) deck, with the others mounted on the upper deck.
2. Most of the coins (2 and 4 Daler) were packed in the aft one-quarter of the hold; the smaller denomination coins (1/2 and 1 Daler) appear to have been stored higher in the aft section as these were recovered somewhat to the east and Northeast of the main portion of the ballast and cargo site. Also of great interest was the fact that for the first time plate money had been found in the same context as when they had been packed into boxes for shipment. In one area they found that straw had been packed between the plates; research later established that newly minted plate money was packed in wooden boxes in this fashion before being transported from the mint to the bank or other distribution center. Thus it can be concluded that many of the plate coins from the "Nicobar" had never been in circulation.
3. The large sheet anchor, normaly used in desperate situations and normally stored in the hold of 18th century ships, was found to be on the lee side of the ballast pile.
4. The lower, smaller anchors used for day-to-day anchoring (several of which were usually carried as replacements), were found close together on the lee side near the bow of the wreck.

All in all, "Nicobar" yielded approximately 3,000 Swedish plate coins in the excavation process. These were taken to the Cultural History Museum for cleaning and study; Swedish numismatist Bertel Tingstrom, one of the experts on plate money, spent considerable time at the museum studying the "Nicobar" plates and helping with the cataloging of the find. Due to the great natioonal and international interest in the "Nicobar", the Cultural Museum retained about 60 of the recovered plates for its collection; the others became the property of the fortunate finders.

The finding of the "Nicobar" and its cargo has added greatly to our understanding of European trade with the East during the 18th century, and also to the greater understanding of the plate money of Sweden. Until the discovery of the "Nicobar", only about 11,000 plate coins were known to still exist; all of a sudden this extant population increased by 3,000 of so. Of the approximately 3,000 plates recovered from the "Nicobar" site, many were so heavily corroded by the action of the ocean waters, worn by friction with sand or other plates, or otherwise damaged by the elements as to be virtually unidentifiable as to denomination or date of issue. On the other hand, although showing evidence of immersion in salt water for over 200 years, several of the plates are still readily identifiable as to denomination and/or date of issue; many of these have only one or two of the circular stamps legible enough for identification, but few have clearer impressions remaining and are even more easily recognized and identified.

Thus, after several years of cleaning, analysis, study, and sorting, these elusive examples of a very interesting numismatic experiment (which lasted over 130 Years!) are now more available to the general, and certainly the specialized, collector.

AN ANCIENT GREEK SILVER COIN AT AN EXCELLENT VALUE!

After the great victory of the Roman general, Flamininus, over the Macedonians in 197 B.C., the freedom of the Greeks was proclaimed. Ever since Philip II, Alexander the Great's father, defeated the Greeks in 338 B.C. the the city-states in mainland Greece had the heavy foot of the Macedonian Kingdom on their neck. So when the Greeks found themselves once more master of their own destiny in 197 B.C. many of the freed city-states formed economic leagues to facilitate trade and commerce.

The Greek city-states on the eastern half of Central Greece formed a league called the Thessalian League named after the geographical area Thessaly, in which these city-states were located.

This league issued silver coins called the Double Victoriatus. These silver coins proclaim the freedom and self determination of the Greeks after 140 years of harsh Macedonian domination. These coins portray on the obverse, Zeus, the mighty king of the Greek gods while the reverse portrays the goddess Athena, a favorite with the ancient Greeks, in a fighting attitude. Perhaps this symbolizes the Greek determination to fight and defend their newly won liberty.

This great coinage comes to an end after 50 years when the Romans become conquerors in 146 B.C. and thus the new province of Greece was added to the future Roman Empire.

Thessaly, Thessalian League - 196 - 146 B.C. Silver Double Victoriatus. Head of Zeus right, crowned with oak. Reverse: Athena Itonia advancing right, brandishing spear and holding shield.
Type of Sear, Greek Coins and their values, number 2232.

SPECIAL: We offer the Silver Double Victoriatus in Extremely Fine condition for only ..... $195 each (Normal retail value is $300.)

3c Nickel. 1880. Mint State 64+. A needle-sharp strike and fully lustrous. A low mintage date and much scarcer in this state of preservation than a Proof $1550

Shield Nickel. 1866 Rays. Brilliant Proof 64+. Popular two-year type coin. This glittering gem is needle-sharp and exhibits full mint brilliance. A decidedly rare coin and much undervalued. One of only 125 Proofs struck . $3850

Shield Nickel. 1870. Brilliant Proof 64. A splendid Proof example exhibiting delicate pastel iridescense. This lovely Proof would make an ideal type coin. $600

Liberty Head Nickel. 1886. PCGS Proof 64. Boldly struck and fully brilliant. A top flight example of the second rarest date in the series $1450

Seated Liberty Dime. 1857. PCGS Proof 63. Attractive smoky bluish gray toning on fully reflective fields. The strike is unusually deep with nice broad rims and a knife edge clearly evident on the obverse. Because the mint produced so few Proofs in 1857, and handed them out exclusively to dignitaries, important visitors to the mint, or other high government officials, its workers took special care in striking each piece. Conservatively, one can say that fewer than 25 of these exist today. Of even greater significance, of these 25, most are far inferior to this piece. (One of only four coins graded Proof 63 by the service) $3975

Seated Liberty Dime. 1870. PCGS Proof 62. Fully struck and having deep, reflective fields throughout $725

GENUINE OIL LAMPS FROM THE FIRST CHRISTMAS!

These ancient oil lamps were found in the hills of Judaea in the Holyland. The oil lamp was probably the most important part of ancient life, as it provided light. The oil lamp was filled with oil poured into the center hole on top, with a wick inserted into the side hole. These were the same oil lamps used by the Maccabees in conjunction with the first celebration of Chanukah. These 2000 year old oil lamps are in superb condition. Pour in some oil put in a wick and strike a match, and they will light up a room as they did 2000 years ago! These 2000 year old oil lamps from the Holyland would make a most unique gift.

Each lamp will be accompanied by a certificate of authenticity.

These coins are among the most important pieces of Judaic numismatics produced between the end of the Bar Kokhba Revolt in the year 135 and the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948. And they are priced remarkably reasonably at under $100 each!

For many centuries, scholars have sought to solve the mystery of Hebrew letters found on Hungarian silver coins minted under Bela IV (1235-1270) and Stephan V (1270-1272)...concluding that they represent the initials of otherwise unknown Jewish mintmasters.

Thanks to research by Gyula Radoczy, amplified by Daniel Friedberg in his fascinating book "Medieval Jewish Seals from Europe," we now know the full identitiy of these Jewish Counts, who held high positions in the Hungarian government. Due to a very fortunate acquisition, Superior is able to offer a small quantity of Choice Very Fine examples of these 700 year old rarities, minted by father and son - Count Chenok and Count Altman.

Count Chenok is referred to in a document issued by King Bela IV in 1250, as "the Jewish Henel (Chenok) count of the royal chambers (treasury)." Friedberg's research indicated that "for services rendered, Bela granted a Chenok the fortress castle Komorm, 21 villiages, and the Tata mill." It is believe that coins were struck with his hebrew initial "chet" (ח) circa 1260.

After Chenok died in 1265, his fortress and mill were given to Queen Maria to settle outstanding debts. His son, Count Altman, then became a lessee of royal mints and struck silver coins with the Hebrew letter "aleph" (א) during the period 1265 to 1272.

Following complaints by Pope Urban IV about non-christian mint lessees, Hungarian King Ladislaus IV (1272-1290) continued to employ Jewish lessees of the royal mints, but forbade them from including Hebrew letters on their coins.

These coins stand as a unique and irrefutable evidence of a brief period of Jewish liberty in an otherwise almost uninterrupted 2000 year history of intolerence and persecution, ranging from the Maccabee's struggle for religious freedom to the Holocaust.

Ira Goldberg, who negotiated for this historic group of coins, indicates that "for all pratical purposes these are the only Medieval Jewish coins that can be bought, and once these are sold it is extremely unlikely that a similar opportunity will ever occur." Collectors will surely rank these among the rarest and most interesting items they own.

These Medieval Jewish silver coins are in Choice Very Fine condition and exhibit attractive natural antique cabinet toning.

Scholar Daniel Friedenberg aptly summed up: "It is intriguing to think of these unknown men, dead for over 700 years, whose sole stamp in history is a single Hebrew letter."

DIDIUS JULIANUS BUYS ROMAN EMPIRE AT AUCTION!

ROMAN WORLD RULED BY A WOMAN!

AGED MILITARY EMPEROR DIES AT YORK!

CHRISTIANS CONTINUE TO BE PERSECUTED!

CARACALLA MURDERS OWN BROTHER!

Thus the A.D. late 2nd - early 3rd century headlines would have read, if there had been newspapers and enough people to read them. These coins do bear mute testimony to these and other events which shaped and shook the Roman empire during these difficult times. Our coins are virtually Mint State silver tetradrachms minted in the Holy Land and surrounding territories. Reminiscent of earlier Phoenician shekels, they boldly portray the emperor's portrait on the obverse and a majestic eagle on the reverse.

These thick, large coins had tremendous buying power in ancient times, much different than our near-worthless coins jingling like tinsel-toys in our pockets today. More like hundred-dollar bills, these coins were treasured and dreamt about 1800 years ago as they are today by those fortunate enough to possess one. Part of a relatively small hoard recently unearthed in the Middle East, they represent "the pick of the lot," being lustrous and virtually in mint condition. It is quite possible that these coins were part of a group minted to pay troops, as during the Severan dynasty there was much fortification and strengthening of military might at the frontiers.

Selected silver tetradrachms, subject to limited availability, minted during the Severan Dynasty in virtually Mint State condition are proudly offered at the following prices:

GENUINE 2000 YEAR OLD "BIBLE COINS"

Have been transformed into unique pieces of jewelry that will bring the wearer inspiration...and compliment!

Long before there were coins, gold jewelry was used as money. In the time of Moses: "We have therefore brought an obligation for the Lord, what every man hath gotten, of jewels of gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, to make an atonement for our souls" (Numbers 31:50).

About one thousand years after Moses, the Judaeans struck their first coins - small bronzes called "prutahs," "leptons," or "mites." The Maccabean rulers John Hyrcanus (135-104 BC) and Alexander Jannaeus (103-76 BC), issued coins with the design of a double-cornucopiae (horns-of-plenty) and an ancient Hebrew inscription indicating that they were authorized by "the High Priest and community of the Jews." This design continued to be used until the fall of the Maccabean dynasty in 37 BC; they were still in general circulation during the lifetime of Jesus.

These Maccabean bronzes are likely candidates as the famous "Widow's Mites": "And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how many people cast money into the treasury; and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites... And he called unto him his disciples, and saith onto them... that this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury." (Mark 12:41-43).

Superior Stamp and Coin Company, one of America's major dealers in ancient Biblical coins, has chosen genuine 2000 year old Maccabean bronze mites with legible inscriptions and designs, and natural patinas, to be custom mounted in glittering 14 karat gold frames (that precisely fit each coin), attached to matching 14 karat gold studs so that they can be worn as unique pierced earrings. Indeed, each pair is unique since every handstruck ancient coin is a somewhat different shape, and are minted from a multitude of dies.

Ancient coin jewelry is one of the most popular fashion trends today, with leading jewelers selling pieces for thousands of dollars... but none can have greater significance than our Bible Coin gold earrings which we are pleased to offer at the remarkably affordable price of only $99.50 (about what you would expect to pay for the coins alone!). Struck for ancient kings... these are truly "fit for a queen" today. This is a meaningful acquisition that will be treasured for a lifetime!

STRANGE BUT TRUE FACTS

- ★ It is strange that a pagen object appears as one of the most popular symbols used on ancient Maccabean coins. In Greek mythology, it is related how the horn of the river god Achelous was wrenched off by Hercules, and became a horn-of-plenty (cornucopia).
- ★ It is strange that the archaic form of ancient Hebrew used on all ancient Judaean coins, probably could not be read by most of the people... but could only be understood by the priests!

The Thirty Pieces of Silver

Of all the Biblical references to coins, the "thirty pieces of silver" paid to Judas Iscariot for his betrayal of Christ is perhaps the best known. Throughout numismatics, one of the coins most in demand by collectors who cherish their New Testament is an example of the famous "thirty pieces of silver", also known as a "Shekel of Tyre."

It is true that each fresh re-reading of this painful episode is enough to make even the most avid collector feel, for the moment, some of the same disgust for money and its evil power which Judas himself felt later when, in his revulsion at what he had done, "He cast down the pieces of silver...and went and hanged himself." (Matthew 27:5). Throughout history there has been a persistant desire to hold one of these historic treasures in one's hand, recalling the greatest betrayal in all history.

The obverse of these silver shekels are idolatrously adorned with the laureated head of Melkarth, a Phoenecian god, while the reverse exhibits a proud eagle sitting on a ship's prow. A palm branch appears in the backround behind the eagle with the legend in Greek around reading, "Tyre Sacred and Inviolable Sanctuary." These are dated with Phoenecian dates and were struck in the First Century B.C. As an added historic note, the silver shekel of Tyre, because of its high grade of silver, was the only coin that the Jews were allowed to use for paying temple tax.

It is interesting to note that the thirty silver shekels' monetary value was (to the best of our knowledge) only a little over $30 in today's American money! For treachery so profound and so far-reaching it was a price minute beyond belief.

The silver Shekel of Tyre is represented by the following Biblical references:

- It is the only coin accepted as payment for the annual Jewish temple tax, according to the Talmud (tractate Skekalim 1:7).
- It was therefore the coin found in the mouth of a fish, since this coin was to pay the temple tax for Jesus and St. Peter (Matthew 17:24-27).
- Most notorious of all, it was surely the coin used to pay Judas Iscariot his 30 pieces of silver for betraying Jesus (Matthew 26:27-9).

The Ottoman Empire

The Terror of Christian Europe and the Empire that Helped Forge the Events of Modern History

The beginnings of the Ottoman are shrouded in legend and few historical facts are known about them before A.D. 1300. The descendants Empire of the Ottomans most probably were Nomadic people from Central Asia who were pushed into Asia Minor by other Nomadic tribes. From the very beginning they were at odds with the Byzantine Empire, the direct decendants of the Roman Empire of Caesar and Constantine the Great. This conflict finally culminated in the famous siege and sack of the Byzantine capital of Constantiople by Mehmed II, full development of the Renaissance in 15th Century Europe for many scholars, and ideas hidden in the East now found refuge and fertile ground in Europe to further develop and grow.

By the middle of the 16th century the Mediterranean Sea almost became an Ottoman lake, with just the areas covered by present day Spain, France, and Italy not being under Ottoman control. To help keep their foes at bay the Ottomans created an an elite military force called the Janissaries, made up of the children of the subject Christian population from the Balkans, brought up as Muslims, and trained as ferocious and invincible soldiers.

With such invincible foes as the Ottomans, the Europeans had to look for alternate routes to the East. This spurred the Portuguese explorers to find a sea route to India and the Orient, which opened up the Age of Discovery in Europe and the landing in the New World by Christopher Columbus.

The famous siege of Vienna in A.D. 1683, when the Ottomans were repulsed, proved to be the turning point in Ottoman history. For the next 200 years the Ottoman Empire suffered a slow decline but nonetheless played an important role in the political and military treaties and power struggles of Europe and the Middle East. The end of the once all-powerful Ottoman Empire, now called the "Sick Man of Europe," came after the close of World War 1.

It should be noted that it was during the Ottoman rule that the roots of the foundation of the modern state of Israel came into play with religious tolerance being practiced by Ottomans. When the British captured Jerusalem in A.D. 1917, the Zionist movement was well under way.

We are pleased to offer golden treasures from this turbulent period. Each treasure is a gold Dinar minted by the Ottoman sultan during the 18th Century. None of these coins have images on them as it would have been sacrilegious. The Koran teaching specifically made this point. Thus, the Muslims, on their coins, developed the art of calligraphy to the height of perfection.

Each gold coin has on it the tughra, or royal monogram of the ruling Ottoman sultan. This tughra is similar to many monograms seen on Scandinavian coins. The Ottoman tughra usually contains the title "Khan" (lord), the sultan's father's name, and the epithet, "El Muzaffer Daima" (the Ever Victorious). In addition, each coin has inscribed on it in Arabic the mint of manufacture, usually Istanbul or Cairo, and the reigning sultan's accession date.

RTD
June 30, 1989
Mr. Mark Goldberg
Superior Stamp & Coin Co., Inc.
9478 W. Olympic Blvd.
Beverly Hills, CA 90212
Subject: 6-8902-S; Sale of Foreign Coins
Dear Mr. Goldberg:
On June 16, 1989, the District's General Manager accepted your offer for the purchase of

We are passing on to our readers our good fortune in being awarded our bid to acquire literally tons of foreign coins which the good citizens of Southern California have dropped into the fare boxes of the thousands of busses that cruise this area. The successful bid took several trips for to complete the hauling and we want to move this massive group just as fast as possible. So let's get the price down and move it out. We took a sample look at one of these 50 pound bags and found a considerable amount of European coinage which has substantial face value. In addition we found very little copper coinage. There is a wide assortment of coinage from all over the world and we think that you will agree that these unsearched bags will at least provide you with some real enjoyment. Naturally we will not accept returns since we would never be able to know what was originally contained. We have decided to chop our price to a record low amount just to move them out.

You Can help "Stamp Out Extinction©" with our stamp facsimile T-shirts, sweatshirts, and mugs produced by noted artist H.D.Hocking. The detail that Mr. Hocking is famous for, as well as superb quaility of silkscreened printing, is what sets these portraits of endangered animals apart; for example, "BeBe" the Lowland Gorilla from the Denver Zoo, is distinguished by her "beauty mark" from all other gorillas. A portion of the profits is donated to the various zoological societies across the country. All garments are Hanes or equal. Pick your favorite!

United States "Farley's Follies" Issues

James A. Farley was Postmaster General under President Roosevelt in 1934. Knowing that President Roosevelt was an ardent stamp collector, Mr. Farley "arranged" that full sheets of the National Park series of stamps plus some other issues were given to the president BEFORE PERFORATIONS WERE ADDED to the sheets. News of this soon reached the public and stamp collectors demanded blood. Mr. Farley WAS FORCED to make these same issues available to the public at large. This was a major scandle of the time and one that raises eyebrows even today.

We have the complete set of FARLEY'S FOLLIES issues (20 different including 2 perforated varieties (orginally issued w/o perofrations) in VF, Never Hinged condition, to offer to you at the low price of only

An American legend: Elvis Presley 1935-77
HE INSPIRED SCORES OF IMITATORS. SOLD MILLIONS OF RECORDS. APPEARED IN 33 MOVIES AND SOLD MORE MILLIONS OF RECORDS. A TREMENDOUS AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY. A PIONEER OF AMERICAN ROCK MUSIC. DIED IN MEMPHIS, TENN. AUGUST 16, 1977.

SPECIAL — $29.95 Order No. 04-093

Cancelled in Port Washington, NY on the day Elvis died in Memphis, these black bordered covers are the only ones we have ever seen. Elvis' death came as a shock to fans throughout the world and these covers would appear to be the only attempt made to record the event.

The recent 10th anniversary of Elvis' death caused an awakening of grief throughout the music industry. The sentiments expressed on the cachet of this cover are more true today then they were ten years ago.

We have a very limited supply of these covers (probably less than 100 were originally made) and can only offer them on a first come, first serve basis. Limit 3 per order.

JAPANESE "STAMP" CREDIT CARDS

Modeled after the immensely popular telephone credit cards in Japan, these plastic "cards" are designed to allow stamps to be easily purchased from vending machines.

They work like this. A card is purchased from the post office in a specified "Yen" amount (Y500, 1000, or 3000). The card is then placed in the vending machine and the value of stamps purchased are deducted electronically from the card. When the purchased face value of the card is used up, the card no longer works.

We are pleased to offer our readers the 1st and 2nd printings of these cards. Each set consists of 17 different cards as follows: 10 different Y500 cards, 5 different Y1000 cards and 2 different Y3000 cards,(total Y16,000 per set). Both sets have the same illustrated pictures but different code numbers and are in VF unused condition. Each set comes in a special plastic album with the cards in special pouches. These sets are sold out at post offices in Japan and are already listed in the Sakura and the JSDA (Japanese specialized stamp) catalogs. This is the start of a new specialized collecting area and we are sure that they will prove to be extremely popular.

We have only a limited number of sets available. When placing your order be sure to specify if we should back order your order if we've already sold out.

SOVIET SHUTTLE COVER

A Philatelic envelope has been prepared by Mezhunarodnaya Kniga, the Soviet space agency, to commemorate the first test flight for the space shuttle Buran. The covers were not aboard the shuttle itself, but were at the Baikonour space facility for the launch and recovery.

The postmarks on the Yuri Gagarin postage stamp are from the "Baikonour Cosmodrome" and are dated November 15, 1988. There There are two postmarks, one for the launch and one for the successful landing at the space center.

The back of each cover has a rubber stamp, with the legend in Russian and English,"Commemorative Cover Devoted to the Test Launching of 'Energia' Carrier Rocket and Space Shuttle Buran 15.11.88 Glavkosmos USSR and V/O Mezhdunarodnaya Kniga." Each cover is individually authenticated and signed by A. Ya. Belostotsky, General Director of Kniga, the official Soviet export agency.

The United States Stamp 1847-1869

The Ryohei Ishikawa Collection

Published in 1982, this full color folio volume is a tribute to what has been called "The finest U.S. classic collection ever formed." The color photography is scrupulously accurate and the book will serve as a reference to shades of the difficult early issues. Mr. Ishikawa's collection contains singles, blocks, and covers representing virtually every classic rarity in the finest possible condition. If nothing else, this book will allow you to see items almost never available on the open market. This book is the ultimate present for a friend or yourself.

A TRULY STRIKING ERROR

1978 Wright Bros. Variety

This is a striking variety with the Blue and Black shifted. The most striking result of this is that "U.S. Airmail 31c," normally printed at the bottom of the stamp, now is printed at the top.

A truly striking error that will make you rub your eyes in wonder. VF. NH. Limited quantities available.

UNITED NATIONS "WFUNA" LIMITED EDITION ART PRINTS

An unusual collection of 20 different original art prints created by the artist specifically for a United Nations stamp issue. Virtually all are hand signed by the artist including the highlight of the collection - ANDY WORHAL, who recently passed away, making his signed work even more valuable (the main exceptions are Miro and Hundertwasser). All prints were issued in limited quantities of 1000 or less. All are numbered and listed in VF condition. Many even have the appropriate U.N. stamp tied by FD special cancel on the print.

Those of you who collect United Nations stamps, autographs, or who are lovers of fine art, are sure to appreciate the outstanding opportunity this offer presents. We have the only one collection available, who knows when we shall see another...

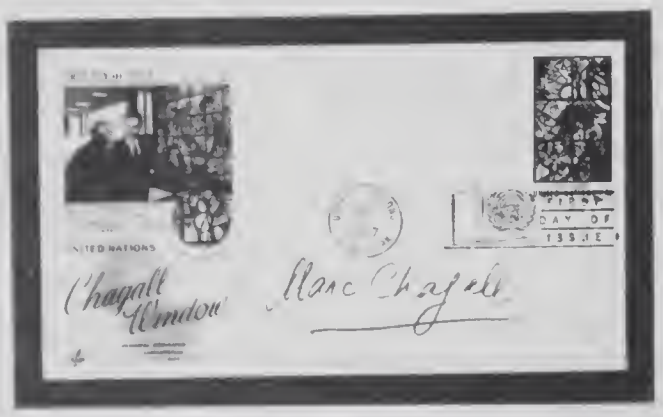
"MARC CHAGALL"



HAND SIGNED BY THE MASTER! Sc 179

The name sends tremors through the art world. One of the giants of 20th century art. The Michaelangelo of his day. Who can say enough about this great artist... Original art by Chagall is beyond the reach of all but a few ultrarich collectors. The best most of us can do is to acquire a print or lithograph of his work; and if it is hand signed, even that is prohibitive. We are pleased to be able to offer our readers the following 1967 United Nations Covers featuring the famous "Chagall" stained glass window at the U.N. Each of these covers are hand signed by Marc Chagall and is guaranteed absolutely genuine. This may be your only opportunity to acquire "an original" by the hand of the master.

EGYPTIAN MUMMY BEAD NECKLACE

Beads were worn by both men and women in ancient Egypt. Numerous semi-precious stones were available from Egypt's natural resources, but in ancient times the greatest number of beads were made from faience. Faience is an inexpensive ceramic paste that was developed about 4,000 BC in Egypt and Mesopotamia. Faience is the fore runner of glass, and although the recipe was a closely guarded secret, the technology spread throughout the ancient world.

During the Late Period, in Egypt, circa 1085 B.C., faience beads were produced primarily for funerary use. Egyptians believed that to insure comfort in the netherworld, the deceased should be surrounded by items from daily life. Quantities of faience beads were buried with the mummy, sometimes having been woven into a shroud to cover the outer linen wrapping.

The Egyptian word SHA ( ) meant luck, and SHA SHA became the word for bead, suggesting the beads could bring good luck. This faience mummy bead necklace is from the 26th Dynasty, circa 600 B.C. It has been restrung with an ancient faience amulet from the same period, and is approximately 24 inches long.

Certificate of authenticity will accompany each necklace.
